

ELKS DEFEAT THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

A Hotly Contested Game with Several Decisions Questioned.

The Elks defeated the Knights of Columbus in a hotly contested game in the Sunset League last evening. There was a big crowd present, as the game was expected to be close, and they were not disappointed. There was more or less kicking over decisions, especially that of Dennison, on a decision on second base. The latter's work has not been satisfactory, and a change in umpire on bases will be demanded by the Elks and Knights. The Knights were unable to score after the first inning, but they had a chance in the fourth, though poor base-running killed it.

Frank Leary pitched for the Elks and he was there with the goods when the occasion arose. Heffernan pitched a good game, but he was hit when they were needed.

The Elks opened with Pray being thrown out at first. Hanson drew a base on balls and Bunker singled, scoring Hanson. Cragen drove a long drive into deep center that Jack Mates made a great catch of, and Bunker beat the throw home. Paul was hit and left as Zivinsky was thrown out at first.

The Knights immediately tied the score. Reardon opened with a single. Flanagan was thrown out at

JOSEPH GOOCH IS ALIVE

He Watches People Drag River From His Place Of Hiding

Herald's Prediction That He Would Be Found Alive Proves To Be Correct

Joseph Gooch of Kittery who was supposed to be resting in a watery grave at the bottom of the river is very much alive today. Joseph who startled the people of the town across the river was not so tired of life as his note expressed and is still with us.

It appears that Joseph did not have a very strong idea of shuffling off this mortal coil but on the other hand needed a little rest. No cold icy water of the Piscataqua for Joe and he did not even wet his feet. While the people of the town were dragging the river for hours on Wednesday for his body, Joseph was reclining in the hay loft of the barn watching every move that was made. Later they dragged the hay mound and were not long in locating Gooch. Joseph had nothing to say as to his resurrection any more than he was glad to be back among the old folks once again.

BIRTH OF THE PORTSMOUTH DAILY CHRONICLE

Now Entering On Its Sixtieth Year

The fifty-ninth anniversary of the birth of the Portsmouth Chronicle which occurred on Wednesday, Aug. 2, reviews recollections and brings up the letters of sixty-four years ago. I have been reading them—those old letters—and they tell an interesting story of youthful projects and things as they were to two boys of eighteen years. Among other affairs there comes through the far perspective something that will interest you, and probably your subscribers, as a thing of local history. It was the beginning, the very first conception, of the idea of establishing the Daily Chronicle.

There was a period of incubation of just five years from the laying of the egg to the coming of the chicken. If you will allow such an appellation to so substantial and well established a newspaper as you are publishing, I will try to tell you about it.

Frank W. Miller and this L. W. B. were two apprentices, the one in the Newburyport Herald office, (though a Portsmouth boy), and the other in the office of the Portsmouth Journal trying to prepare for a printer, publisher and future editor of that old weekly newspaper. They had been fast friends from earliest childhood, and had a frequent correspondence after being thus separated.

In a letter of August 5, 1847, Frank writes:

"By the way, speaking, or writing, about newspapers, I wonder that somebody has not, long before now started a daily paper in Portsmouth, or at any rate a tri-weekly. If nobody starts one before I am free, I shall make strenuous exertions to do so then, myself, together with some other enterprising young man.—If I can call myself by that name. Pray write soon and tell me what you think of my plan, of you and I starting such a paper, with a decent number of subscribers, say 500."

He evidently received a rather favorable reply, for in his letter of Oct. 4 he says:

"You only say now that it is 'looking some way into the future.' Granted, but you go on to say: 'Still I like the plan very much, etc.' Now I think that by the time we are free, i. e. 21, there will be, in and around Portsmouth, a sufficient number of inhabitants, particularly 'storekeepers, merchants, etc., to give a good and hearty support to a Daily Portsmouth Journal, and that if energy and enterprise sufficient for the undertaking, together with good business-like characters and editorial capacity, exist in the breasts of two young men (the readers must guess who) in a sufficiently large degree to warrant the undertaking, it would be well for all concerned that so it should be."

Thus the egg was laid in the nest, and it was warmly brooded over by the two young men with unabated interest year after year. In the meantime they made it their daily employment to fit themselves for conducting a daily paper such as was intended in its first conception. The letters continue occasionally (at times when the young aspirants were separated) up to 1851, the year before Messrs. Miller & Gray began the work upon the product of the egg. L. W. B.'s interest was to join with his father in the conduct of the weekly Journal, but Frank Miller carried out the original project and by overcoming great difficulties finally brought before an interested public the first number of the Daily Chronicle, August 2, 1852, working it off on a hand-press and using all the limited means and machinery of those former days. His perseverance, ability and grit achieved success.

His co-laborers in establishing the Chronicle were his brother Thomas and Samuel Gray, all practical printers. At first the type was nearly all set for the paper by Thomas, while the business and newspaper work were by Frank and Mr. Gray, with Tobias H. Miller, the father, as the editorial writer, paragrapher of the news, etc. Mr. Gray is still living in Boston.

And now just a few words for our old friend Frank W. Miller. Enterprise and zeal were marked characteristics of his whole life. He began with really no means excepting what Nature had provided, but with a cheerful disposition to use these means to the best advantage. He was a most positive man, affiliated with every moral reform, and interested himself in every enterprise that looked towards the improvement of the city, state or nation. Temperance, abolition, the Grange, the laboring classes were among his favorites, and he was in the front rank always when any of these favorites needed assistance or support. Naturally his publications partook of this disposition, and stood for the individual and general good of the community as he understood it. Every one knew just where to find him, for he was always conspicuous, "there" upon every moral, political or economical point. He might not be always right—but he always thought himself so! He was rather an extremist and followed his own belief and inclination; but, nevertheless he had many friends and admirers, for he had among other attributes a kind and gentlemanly bearing, though quite plain-spoken when he thought the occasion demanded it. This is a perhaps inadequate description of one who was a dear friend to the writer and who established the first daily paper in Portsmouth.

He closed an eventful and useful life on his fifty-first birthday, Nov. 19, 1880, in his beautiful suburban residence on Lincoln Hill, overlooking the scenery which had grown into beauty under his pioneer efforts; for he was indeed the pioneer of all the improvements that have come to that section of his beloved city within the last half-century, so that now it is the most attractive portion of Portsmouth. Let it be ever remembered as a memorial of his enterprise and artistic taste.

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

ANNUAL TAG DAY AUG. 19

Portsmouth Cottage Hospital will have its annual tag day Aug. 19. That date was chosen yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the hospital directors. The committee in charge of tag day organized with Mrs. Henry Emerson Hovey as president. Other officers will be designated at following meetings.

The personnel of the executive board and the chaplones who will supervise the collecting of money will be substantially the same as that in the past two years. Realizing the need of money at the hospital the women who made the tag successes in the past have again proffered their assistance.

NEW PURE FOOD LAW EFFECTIVE ON SEPT. 1

The pure food law passed at the last session of the legislature goes in effect on Sept. 1 and is very important to fruit dealers and bakers. The law is as follows:

Fruits, vegetables, meats, sea-foods, confectionery, bakers' products, or any other articles of food must not be displayed or stored on the sidewalk or outside the place of business, or in any open door or window or be transported upon any public or private way, unless such products are covered by cases of glass, wood, metal or other approved covering; and all such cases or containers or the supports for food, shall be raised not less than two feet above the sidewalk. The covering of fruits with netting will not be deemed a sufficient compliance with this order. But this regulation shall not apply to fruits and vegetables which have to be peeled or cut open before use. Fruit from which decayed portions have been removed shall not be offered for sale.

Whereas bread is an article eaten without being subject to any preparation, and commonly undergoes frequent or objectionable handling and exposure in connection with its distribution, sale and delivery from bakeries, stores and wagons, it is ordered that all bread loaves, before removal from the baking room, shall be wrapped in clean, unused paper, unprinted or printed on one side only. The use of newspapers or of any unclean paper for the wrapping of any articles of food is prohibited.

A NOTABLE FOREST CONFERENCE BEING HELD

Large Gathering of Prominent Men at White Mountains--Interesting Program.

The second day of the conference on Forestry opened at ten o'clock today with a number of new arrivals. Among the speakers was O. L. Frisbee of Portsmouth. The following addresses were delivered:

A WIDER APPRECIATION OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

O. L. Frisbee, Portsmouth

As a man thinketh so is he, but the statement of the operation of a great universal law, as invariable and constant as the swing of the planets and the rise and fall of the tides, and just as natural as either.

Cesar and Napoleon were no greater than their thoughts, and these were not determined by the size of their stature. New Hampshire will be no greater than the thoughts of her people, and these have never been determined by the size of the state. For you do not have to start big, to grow big. What did the oak start from?

New Hampshire has always had big thoughts, she fought in all the wars of the colonies and on the side of Old Glory since it first floated. She is the mother of the nation, and the mother of the republican form of government in the world.

For the last 300 years she has sent out her energy to help to develop our country, and has kept enough home to develop our own state. Her people have always possessed the three G's, grace, grit and gumption. The first made Noah build the ark, the second made Grant the best general, and the third makes every man and woman in New Hampshire do the right thing at the right time.

We can boast of as many natural resources as some other sections of the country, but we can boast of what we have been able to do through the utilization of the brain and energy of our people.

We have no great grain fields at home; we look to the West for our food products. We have no iron and coal mines at home; we get our iron and steel from Pennsylvania and Alabama, and our coal from Maryland and Virginia, to supplement our white coal.

We have no sheep ranches and cotton plantations at home; we feel the spindles of our mills with the products of the West and the South and even send to far off Egypt and Australia for cotton and wool.

Gathering from the world these materials, we touch them with the magic wand of energy, of trained hand and brain, and they pour out for us a flood of gold and give us an industrial development that makes us one of the industrial states of the union.

When we remember that this little state, using the materials drawn from other sections and other lands, has built up a business structure so vast, so solid and all comprehensive, under the present development of our natural resources, we know that when they are fully developed we will be able to turn our whole state, as Philip H. said of Belgium, into one large town, except the White Mountains which we will preserve as the Switzerland of America.

We should not only conserve our products of the farm and the factory, natural resources but improve them across the sea into every land beyond use. No wise use of the farm exhausts its fertility. So with the forest, and we can greatly increase our transportation facilities by developing our waterways. Carlyle said commerce was king, but if he had lived until today, he would say transportation is king. Transportation taxes levied and collected by the railways of the country in 1907, were more than 8 times greater in amount than the duties collected on imports by the national government. Transportation has the tariff hopelessly beaten at the very outset of the race.

The three R's of transportation, roads, rails and rivers, should be developed to their greatest extent to secure economy in transportation. Search where you will throughout the civilized world and you will find this thing true, that the largest cities, and the densest population, the greatest development of industry and commerce, are to be found in those regions which are most abundantly supplied with transportation facilities. This is not an accident; the two facts stand related as cause and effect. Supremacy in commerce is not merely coincident with, but consequent upon, economy of transportation. There are three ways that lead to the growth of cities, the development of states and the prosperity of nations—the highways, railways and waterways, and the greatest of these are the waterways.

New Hampshire is blessed with good waterways. She has the queen of the Atlantic and the government canal so that New Hampshire will, in common with other Atlantic coast states, have economy in transportation.

In recent years water power has become a matter of great national moment. New Hampshire is one of the great water power states of the Union. Her greatest single natural resource is her abundant water power; one of her rivers turns more mill machinery than any river in the world. Before the days of improved electrical transmission, the importance of water power was confined largely to the locality in which it was generated, but it has now become a public utility in which the individual citizen is vitally concerned, and as the amount of water power that may be made available is dependent on the flow of rivers, we must conserve the waters of our lakes and streams to maintain, and if possible increase, our water power, which with the coming tidal power will furnish the white coal of the future to turn the wheels of commerce in smokeless economy and vast sum is expended almost entirely in travel to view agreeable scenic conditions either natural or urban.

The tourist pays every year vast sums in this country for the same reason, and New England gets $60,000,000 of it, a sum greater than the silver mines of the West produce a year. This business will increase with the wealth and population of the country and New Hampshire will always get the lion's share because she is the most beautiful. We are learning what the countries of Europe long ago learned, the money value of scenic beauty.

New Hampshire is a unique corner of the earth with a climate delightful beyond description. She does not suffer from anything like the Scottish lay of the state the golden stream of universal trade.

The United States occupies a unique place midway between the Orient and the Occident. The Panama canal can never handle all the commerce between the Atlantic and the Pacific that will come with the awakening of the 400,000,000 of people in the East. The queen of the Atlantic and its counterpart, Seattle, on the Pacific coast, will be terminals for the cheapest route for the trade that will surely come overland between those sections of the world, and New Hampshire will be one of the highways of commerce of that trade.

We should hold inviolate our great scenic heritage, and retain for posterity God's glory of mountains, valleys, lakes, forests and seascapes. We should conserve our forests so that we will not see here the same conditions that we find in northern Africa, Spain, Greece and Palestine. We can not escape the workings of the natural law any more than the old countries did. The granite we now export to mark the resting place of the dead, we would need at home to mark the historical spots where once stood our magnificent resorts.

It is a recognized fact that no part of America is more worthy of attention by the tourists or has more beautiful scenery, or greater charm of climate than New Hampshire. It is a section of the world worthy of all that can be said of it, and the scenery displayed in autumnal garb is no land on earth pretends to rival.

New Hampshire is the world's most beautiful state, and it is our patriotic and economic duty to preserve her so. It is New Hampshire beautiful that retains the love of her citizens and makes her the playground of the nation, the Switzerland of the New World, the great American Mecca and the home of the picturesque.

The intrinsic value of natural beauty may be illustrated by comparison with the worth of some monuments of art, since art is closely related to nature. Remove the Parthenon from Athens, in other words sell it for what it is worth in marble, how much would the land under it bring? As it is today, a magnificent ruin, it is a jewel in the diadem of Greece, the center point of her coronet, a spot for which every nation in the world has the greatest admiration. What would Rome be without the Coliseum? Not only is it a magnificent ruin, but it embodies the very life of ancient Romans. It is the apotheosis of the might and greatness of a nation that once ruled the civilized world.

What the Parthenon and the Coliseum are to Greece and Italy, the White Mountains are to New Hampshire.

There are great economic reasons for jealously guarding our scenic heritage. The tourist travel pays annually to Europe half a billion of our dollars. Of this vast sum Americans contribute a full half, getting back a far smaller sum in return travel from all the world. They do not travel to Europe and America to see ugly things or wasted scenery. This vast sum is expended almost entirely in travel to view agreeable scenic conditions either natural or urban.

The tourist pays every year vast sums in this country for the same reason, and New England gets $60,000,000 of it, a sum greater than the silver mines of the West produce a year. This business will increase with the wealth and population of the country and New Hampshire will always get the lion's share because she is the most beautiful. We are learning what the countries of Europe long ago learned, the money value of scenic beauty.

New Hampshire is a unique corner of the earth with a climate delightful beyond description. She does not suffer from anything like the Scottish not only cleanses, preserves and beautifies the teeth without injury, but imparts purity and fragrance to the breath, removing instantly the odor of tobacco.

Smists, the English fogs or the Russian ice blast—and epidemics are unknown. Her climate is bracing to brown and brain.

She is fanned by the breezes from the country and from the ocean. She is the lip that meets and kisses the breezes upon the mountains and from the sea calling into being the delightful climate that makes glad the hearts of her citizens and visitors and creates conditions through which they rock in the cradle of health and comfort.

The situation in country life and the hotels has been wonderfully developed in the last five years by the development of the motor tourist business throughout the country. New Hampshire has been alive to the situation and has supplied good roads for the motor tourists, and good roads mean advancement in education and religious activities as well as business development.

Has not New Hampshire an unusual opportunity for a State Forestry address delivered by Hon. George B. Leighton at the Forestry Conference Thursday morning, Aug. 3.

At this meeting we shall hear of the saving of the White Mountains by national and state laws because the people now believe that the economic value of the rivers requires it and because the invigorating and life renewing qualities of a forest country are of value to the people of this and other states. The state of New Hampshire was when our people came to it forest clad. Climate and climatic conditions make the prairies of the west adapted to the growing of grain. Forest knowledge and forest culture are demanded here just as agricultural knowledge is in the grain growing states. If all the people withdrew from the state it would again become forest clad but new forest growth can be bettered by intelligent care and protection rather than by leaving nature to work unaided.

The nation should have in time, but when this generation has passed away, an imposing forest in Crawford Notch and I wish to call to mind another grant of land in the state where natural conditions seem ready to cooperate with such an effort.

It is a hill country embracing the back half of the state stretching southward from Lake Umbagog some twenty miles to Nubanusit Lake in Nelson and approximately fifteen miles in width. The elevation above sea is from something less than one thousand feet to two thousand feet. The amount of water acreage and water storage in this highland is rather surprising to one who has not observed it. In all some fifty ponds and lakes exist, the head waters of rivers of importance to the manufacturing interests of the state. The Ashuelot heads in the Ashuelot Ponds of Marlow and Washington. The Stoddard ponds are the head waters of an important branch of the Contoocook as is Nubanusit Lake of another branch to the south. The Sugar River receives considerable water from its southern branch which rises in Goshen. As showing the extent of water it may be said that there is navigable water for a tug of some eight miles in the Stoddard ponds and but for the dam, another pond of two miles might be added. Nubanusit Lake is over five miles in length. Although Umbagog is at the north end, so little water flows to it from this tract that it can hardly be considered as being protected by the forest of this region. The Ashuelot runs a large number of mills before it flows into the Connecticut at Hinsdale and the Contoocook is of importance to an equal if not larger number in Peterboro, Bennington, Hillsboro and Penacook. The mills on Sugar River at Claremont employ large numbers of our people. It is rather surprising that although the state of New Hampshire owns the Connecticut to the west bank, but little of the water power of that stream is utilized in New Hampshire. At Bellows Falls, the water power development is entirely in Vermont and the large power plant at Hinsdale, sells at the present time all of its power in Vermont and Massachusetts. Quite properly there fore is the conservation of that river in the hands of the nation. On the other hand a permanent diminution of water flow in the Ashuelot and Contoocook is a lessening of the industrial activity and ability of this state and the speaker is of the opinion that this flow and storage is not now what it might be.

The region in question was originally covered with spruce, pine and hard wood forest and considerable lumbering is still done but not very profitably for reasons which will be spoken of later. Considerable areas are pasture lands on which new forest growth is taking hold. From Pitcher Mountain in Stoddard one may look over these clumps of forest and the ponds that round one much of the highlands of Scotland. This aspect much impressed the English Ambassador, Mr. Bryce, who visited this spot with me last summer. We know that the reforestation of such area unaided is inefficient and that a forest crop requires a much longer time of growth than when unaided by forestry methods.

The highlands of which I speak comprising some three hundred square miles is now the home of less than three thousand people who gain a precarious existence because the land is not adapted to agriculture and because the forest crop is not matured and handled as it should be. The region has heretofore been removed from means of communication and transportation but this condition could be remedied at no expense were the lands in the control of the state. At present the Nashua and Seane branch of the Boston and Maine passes south of the southern extremity some four miles at Harborsville. The Claremont branch crosses the northern edge and the new west side state road skirts the western boundary of these highlands while on the east there is no railway or highway parallel with it for ten miles. Stoddard has been the center of the district, and for some years a considerable cut of lumber was marketed by hauling it over a poor road to Hancock. Nubanusit Lake is reached only at its southern end by highway but constructing a modern highway along the shores of Nubanusit, over the slight divide and tapping the present Stoddard, Hancock road, it would seem to be a feasible matter to haul profitably by traction the lumber and forest products to Harborsville. Land within the area under observation is cheap because of lack of transportation and because much of the land has been cut over. Such land is held at from two to four dollars per acre and land with growing timber proportionately higher. So we ask the question, should the state not buy a considerable portion of this area and develop thereon a state forest? It would seem not to do so would be simply to neglect a resource of great value directly and indirectly to our people. would be a mistake to buy too large an area at once but rather to do so in annual purchases extending over it, private interests would acquire much of the remainder for the same purpose. Already there are several large private holdings showing owners would gladly co-operate in developing a large forest area. The land should be under the Forestry Commission, a forester and a competent corps of woodsmen which our Agricultural College should train. The method of work would be cutting off hard wood to let the existing new growth of spruce and pine develop, seeding, planting and fire protection. We know that white pine can pay 1 per cent compound interest and possibly more.

The Forestry Commission should be given considerable freedom in the acquisition and disposition of land it is quite likely that private individuals might wish to buy tracts that had been put under forestry methods, agree to maintain the forest growth under supervision of the state. If such land could be sold at satisfactory profit, the money could be reinvested in other land and so a larger area developed. Again small lots on the shores of lakes might be in demand at a high price when the assurance was given of the surrounding for all time by a state forest.

The region under consideration being one of hills, the run off after storms is rapid and for that reason the large area of ponds and lakes should be utilized to the utmost for storage. Whether the present owners of such waters are willing to co-operate to develop the maximum storage, utilizing it for the benefit of all interested would remain to be determined and if such was found not to be the case, no doubt other means would suggest themselves of maintaining these reservoirs.

In a recent number of American Forestry an example is cited of the Cumberland River as a water shed where floods have increased due to removal of the forest, fires and neglect. The area has become more like a roof than it was. On the other hand the Red River is cited as an area where the ground has been

MEAT FAMINE THREATENED BY STRIKE

London, Aug. 2.—The meat trade of England is seriously threatened by a strike of 12,000 dock laborers at the London docks today, growing out of a dispute over wages. The men claim that their employers promised an increase commencing July 31, but their pay envelopes, when received, failed to contain the advance. Separate meetings of the strikers and the employers were held to discuss the situation.

At least 20 steamers, including the Minnehaha, which has just arrived at Tilbury with a cargo of dressed beef from America, the Anglian, from Boston, with boxed meats, and other American freighters are unable to discharge. Many other vessels are loaded with meat from Australia, New Zealand and Argentina.

The meat and other perishable goods are being taken care of in refrigerators aboard the steamers, but if the strike continues there will be a shortage in the London provinces. Police reserves were sent to the docks, but their services were not required.

The men went quietly from one steamer to another, calling on their fellow-workmen to join the movement, and in every case were successful.

This is the latest picture of the present position of the wreck of the battleship Maine and the work being done to disclose the hull. The heaps of white matter within the cofferdam are piles of crushed rock which were deposited to prevent the caissons from giving way. There are still many feet of mud to be removed before that part of the wreck can be reached which will disclose the true nature of the explosion which caused the disaster.

TO SETTLE THEIR DIFFERENCES IN POLICE COURT

Refusing to submit their evidence to a board of referees, which is customary among the Hebrews, Philip Sarotta and Jacob Gooch will allow their troubles with Hyman Goldman to be presented to Judge Thomas H. Simes in municipal court. Sarotta and Gooch are to be arraigned on Goldman's complaints, which charge Sarotta with larceny of the key of the synagogue and Gooch with using profane and abusive language.

Opposition to the Hebrew school promoted and financed by the Zionist society is said to be the cause of the differences. Goldman is the teacher of the school and in that capacity he is attempting to instill Hebrew literature, history and patriotism into the minds of children. Neither Sarotta nor Gooch sent their children to the school since it was inaugurated. Their refusal was based on the assertion that the school is too heavy a burden for the poor Hebrews to bear.

Goldman had one of the only two keys to the synagogue, in which the school holds forth. One of the Hebrew societies met Sunday night and Goldman loaned the key to the society. Sarotta is inner guard of the society and the key naturally came into his possession, it is said. The key did not come into Goldman's possession yesterday and as a consequence he was obliged to locate the second key before the school could begin its daily session. Goldman is said to have asked Sarotta for the key and Sarotta is alleged to have refused to return it.

In the warrant it is charged that Gooch interrupted the conference between Goldman and Sarotta by hurling abusive and degrading remarks at the pedagogues.

WITH THE BATTLESHIPS

Provincetown, Aug. 2.—A thick fog hung over Cape Cod Bay today and it was believed on shore, probably interfered with the maneuvers of the Atlantic battleship fleet. The torpedo boat destroyer Ammen arrived in port late last night and will join the fleet for the summer maneuvers. The battleship Maine sailed out of Provincetown today to join the fleet outside. The expected night attack, which was to have been made by the battleships against the torpedo boat and the submarines last night, did not materialize. Shortly before midnight the commanders of the torpedo boats received wireless messages from the battleships, instructing them not to go out of the harbor. No reason for the order could be learned here today.

The fleet dropped out of sight of land yesterday and far out on the open sea, conducted, far from prying eyes, their summer maneuvers. Acting under orders from Washington, the practice work was conducted in absolute secrecy. Rear Admiral Huro Oglethorpe, commander of the fleet, abandoned the coast off Barnstable, where Rear Admiral Seaton Schreeder conducted the drills last year, and boats which had been out all day searching for ships, returned without as much as sighting the smoke from their funnels. It was expected that the battleships would draw in nearer

NAVY YARD

Capt. Rogers Takes Charge

Capt. Charles C. Rogers, U. S. N., arrived at the yard at nine o'clock this morning and an hour later relieved Capt. Frank A. Wilner as commandant. Shortly after taking office the heads of the several departments of the yard and commanders of the ships officially called on the new head of the reservation. Capt. Rogers is a native of Virginia and was appointed from Tennessee June 8, 1872. He was recently in command of the cruiser Washington.

From Navy to Army

Sergeant Littlejohn, U. S. M. C., for several years attached to the yard barracks here has enlisted in the coast artillery corps and is now filling the place of corporal in the 1st Company at Fort Andrews, Boston.

A Large Number for Examination

Twenty-six applicants appeared on Wednesday for the examination for the list of quartermen and leading men. The largest number of these are from the hull division. The examination is expected to be completed today.

Tug Under Repairs

The tug Penacook is hauled up for ten days for repairs to her engines, condenser and boiler.

Will be Back Soon

Chief Constructor W. L. Capps, U. S. N., who is now in England, is expected to return to this country about August 15. He will go to Washington and prepare the report of his observation during his trip around the world, after which it is expected he will avail himself of a long leave of absence.

Bravery Ends Jail Term

As a reward for saving the life of a fellow sailor Acting Secretary of the Navy Beekman Winthrop commuted today the sentence of six months imposed on Forrest N. Dobkins, a first class fireman, which would have expired Sept. 15. Last week W. T. Manley fell overboard while coaling the United States receiving ship Southern at Portsmouth, N. H., and Dobkins dived and rescued him.

Capt. Thomas Snowden, Capt. W. Strother Smith, Commander Roger Welles and Commander C. F. Hughes of the U. S. board of inspection and survey of ships went aboard the Maine. The Maine underwent her steam trial today, running over an ocean course between Boston and Rockland, Me., the test lasting twelve hours.

FOR THE HUNTRESS.

Jaunty Sporting Costume
Both Practical and Pretty.

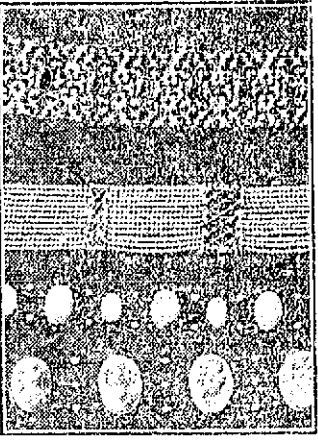

WHEN MILADY GOES HUNTING.

Jaunty and appropriate is the hunting costume illustrated, suitable alike for bagging big game in Africa, when made of the right material, or for bringing down small game in this country.

The skirt is short and buttons down one side of the front with substantial bone buttons. The Norfolk jacket fits the figure comfortably and is natty looking. A plain four in hand and a corduroy cap complete a smart outfit for this particular sport. The costume would be equally good for mountaineering.

Elegance and Richness in New Jewelry. For women who do not look well in low cut bodices without some ornament to break the long line of throat there are wonderfully beautiful collars extravagantly expensive in price.

ATTRACTIVE DESIGNS FOR DOG COLLARS.

Four collars are here illustrated—a cameo collar, the pink cameo string on slender chains; a collar of jade, a pearl and diamond collar and a diamond collar, the diamonds and emeralds rubies set in platinum.

KITCHENETTES.

If tinware is new, rub over carefully with fresh lard and heat carefully before it is used. This will keep it from rusting.

Cold water, ammonia and soap will take out machine grease where other things would fail on account of making the colors run.

A little turpentine dissolved in warm water is the best thing with which to wash windows and mirrors. A little alcohol will also do wonders in brightening glass.

To remove grass stain cover the stain with common cooking molasses and let stand for two or three hours. Wash in lukewarm water. Repeat the process if necessary.

To clean marble take two parts of common baking soda and add to it one part of powdered pumice stone and one of fine salt. Sift the mixture through a sieve and mix it with water, then rub it well all over the marble and the stains will be removed. Wash with a strong solution of salt and water, rinse with clear water and wipe dry.

The daily care of the hardwood floor is very simple. A room that is much used must first be swept with a soft haired brush, then wiped with a long handled dust mop or with a cotton flannel bag put over a broom. If there are spots on the floor they should be rubbed first with a flannel cloth or with a little turpentine on a cloth. The floor should be thoroughly cleaned and polished twice a year. If any water or liquid gets spilled on the floor it should be wiped up immediately, as otherwise it will result in a stain.

TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Forage For Growing Pigs.

Much has been said and written regarding the economy of providing succulent forage for the growing of pigs to the summer season, yet a great many farmers continue to keep their pigs confined in a small pen or yard with little, if any, green feed available.

In case a good pasture lot can be provided for the growing pigs this is, of course, the cheapest method of providing the needed green forage for them, but where this cannot be conveniently done it will pay to cut green forage for them each day. Clover is the best available source of this needed green feed upon most farms, but a variety of green feed can be cheaply provided in this way, especially where only a few pigs are kept.

Individuals Versus Breeds.

In the selection of hogs for breeding animals more attention should be paid to the individual qualities of boar and sow than to the particular breed. Breed alone does not determine good breeding stock. A pure bred boar is to be preferred, and both boar and sow should be rather of a medium than an extreme type of the breed represented. Under present conditions farmers find it most generally profitable to raise the larger breeds of hogs, the sows producing more pigs at a litter and growing more rapidly in weight than the others.

Neglect of Flock Cuts Profit.

The average American farmer considers for the most part that sheep will take care of themselves indefinitely and that they should thrive on the odds and ends of the farm and the leavings of the other stock.

Never was a greater mistake made. The farmer who invests his money in sheep must make up his mind to stay with them all the time. They need protection from predatory animals and from bad weather, and above all they need to be guarded against the ravages of internal parasites.

The Sheep Need Care.

The poorest class of sheep that find their way to the markets of the country are from the farm flocks raised in the best agricultural states. These farmers buy fairly good ewes and use pure-bred rams, but they fall short of giving their sheep proper care and attention.

Changing Turkeys' Roosting Place.

If the turkeys roost in a place where they are not wanted they will seek a roosting place if driven from the old one two or three times just before darkness comes on.

PLOWING UNDER SWEET CLOVER.

As a Soil Restorer the Plant
Equals Any of the Legumes.

As a soil renovator, according to Wallace's Farmer, sweet clover is fully equal if not superior to any of the other legumes. Especially is this true when the tops, as well as the stubble and roots, are plowed under as green manure. In an Illinois investigation it was found that an acre of thrifty sweet clover contained in the tops, stubble and roots 225 pounds of nitrogen, which is more than double the amount found by the Delaware station in an acre of alfalfa or red clover.

On account of its rank growth sweet clover adds a great amount of humus, the Illinois station finding that a good acre of sweet clover yielded 6.4 tons of dry matter, which would furnish as much humus forming material as would twenty-five tons of farm manure. If the entire crop is plowed under sweet clover certainly ranks very high as a soil fertilizer.

The chief question is not whether sweet clover is good when used in this way for restoring soil fertility, but whether it can be grown on the given piece of soil. Possibly the soil may need lime, ground rock or phosphate or inoculation with sweet clover root bacteria.

Other conditions favorable, sweet clover should succeed when sown with oats cut for hay at the rate of ten to twelve pounds of hulled seed to the acre.

Dairy Notes.

Feed cattle all you can afford to during the time they are at pasture, as that helps to keep the pastures in good condition.

All cows do not like the same kind of food; neither do they do as well as on some other kind. Study the wants of the animal.

Successful dairy expansion involves the intelligent, systematic grading or building up of a herd both by selection and breeding.

Cows must be kept clean and healthy and have pure air to breathe, and then they will return a volume of rich, nutritious milk in paying quantities. The cow that wanders over bare pastures and looks wistfully at growing crops she cannot reach is not happy nor contented and will not produce well.

PROGRESS.

What pains and tears the slightest steps of man's progress have cost! Every hairbreadth forward has been in the agony of some soul, and humanity has reached blessing after blessing of all its vast achievement of good with bleeding feet.—Bar-tol.

THE STATE ROADS.

Gov. Bass, accompanied by Engineer Charles H. Hoyt, an expert from the United States department of agriculture, is now making a tour of the state boulevards, with the idea of getting such information from the expert as will be of value to the state in the future extension of the state roads. Engineer Hoyt is loaned to the state by the department as an expert, and while there has been more or less criticism directed toward the Governor for seeking the aid of the National government on this all important question of roads, to us it would seem as though it was a step in the right direction, especially if the Governor and Council will avail themselves of the advice they get from Engineer Hoyt.

That some expert advice is needed there is no question, for the state roads are not what the state should boast of, considering the amount of money expended. We have a fine example in the Ocean boulevard along this coast, which today is in terrible condition from the heavy automobile traffic. On the other hand the state has just completed the section of the road between this city and Newington, and it is a finely constructed highway, and at present shows no signs of wear, but its life will be but a few years at the most unless it is oiled and properly cared for. The upkeep of the road is the all important proposition that the state should consider.

It will be well to suspend judgment until the Governor and Council have the report of Mr. Hoyt in their possession.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

The caption "Bill put all footwear on the free list" does not mean that the President is mixed up in the matter.

King Alfonso's repeated escapades make it also true that "Uneasy lie the heads of the relatives of those that wear a crown."

"Hay! Rebels hem in Capital," says a headline, from which one is lead to suspect that a sewing bee was enjoyed within the gates.

It is hoped that Colonel Astors wedding to Miss Force may make applicable the sobriquet of Sunny John.

New Jersey women who object to the new edict forbidding the wearing of bird plumage upon their headgear have the alternative of leaving the wings on and flying from the state.

That steel bitt sharpened to a dagger point, discovered in Jesse Romero's cell, it is hoped is sharp enough to penetrate the irresponsibilities of Governor Foss, who is inclined to leniency in his case.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

Through the Canal

Anent the suggestion that the battleship Oregon in recognition of her famous trip around the continent at the opening of the Spanish American war, be selected as the first ship to pass through the Panama canal when that great waterway is opened, champions of the venerable and historic Portsmouth have arisen on all sides to urge her prior and, as they view the case, superior claim to the honor. Aside from the numerous other national association connected with her it was the Portsmouth that first raised the American flag on the California coast at San Francisco when the United States took possession of that Mexican territory. She represents the older traditions of the navy, and her history is closely linked with some of the really great events in the history of the nation. It is quite generally understood that the ship is to be sent to the Pacific coast, there to be preserved as a cherished memorial, and her advocates urge this fact as an additional reason in her favor as regards first position in the Panama canal trip. It is suggested that nothing could be more appropriate than that the old Portsmouth relic of other naval days, should be the first to pass through the canal conveyed by a fleet of modern warships. New Hampshire sentiment will naturally be strongly on the side of the Portsmouth in this discussion, but New Hampshire minds are broad enough to appreciate the achievement of the Oregon, which, for want of a canal at the Isthmus of Panama, was forced on a record run around Cape Horn. Neither ship will be without an abundance of study champions, and one of those respective champions needs hesitate to proclaim his sentiment in the matter. An apparent advantage on the side of the Oregon is the fact that her trip is fresh in the memory even of young people, whereas the achievements of the Portsmouth are known to many only through reading of them in history or hearing them recounted. Whichever way the balance may tip, the ship which passes first through the canal will have enjoyed a distinguished honor, and that honor would not have been unworthily bestowed either on the Portsmouth or on the Oregon.—Manchester Union.

Enter Admiral Togo

On board an English steamer, in the company of hundreds of Americans returning from the coronation, Japan's naval hero, Admiral Togo, is traveling toward the United States, where in a few days he will be received as the guest of the government. Including Prince Henry of Prussia, there have been a number of foreigners thus honored by the American people through the Washington authorities. But in the case of Admiral Togo several circumstances combine in making his visit to America exceptionally significant. Only yesterday, as it were, the two great powers bordering on the Pacific ocean were said to pursue conflicting policies. Today the Japanese government has not only dispelled the cloud that seemed to obscure the diplomatic horizon, but, at a token it good will toward the United States, it sends its greatest naval representative here to cement a friendship of many years' standing. Preliminary to his arrival, his mingling on shipboard with citizens of the United States should aid in making the Japanese sailor statesman entirely at home when the representative of President Taft meets.

ALL WRONG

The Mistake is Made by Many Portsmouth Citizens

Don't mistake the cause of backache.

To be cured you must know the cause.

It is wrong to imagine relief is cure.

Backache is kidney ache.

You must cure the kidneys.

A Portsmouth resident tells you how.

George Byers, 172 Gates St., Portsmouth, N. H., says: "My kidneys became disordered some years ago and I suffered severely from pains and lameness in my back. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and at night I was obliged to arise several times. I doctored and tried several remedies, but was unable to find relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Philbrick's Pharmacy. They brought the most satisfactory results. After I had finished the contents of two boxes my trouble had disappeared."

Ralph Rose, Who is Coming Out For the Olympic Team

RALPH ROSE

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—Desiring to make the next American Olympic team, Ralph Rose, the champion shot putter at the various regatta, is coming out of his shell to prepare for the iron sphere event in the 1912 Swedish games. The native son's determination to fight for a place on the big team no doubt will send a thrill into the other shot putters when they learn of this. Rose holds all kinds of records in the shot put.

him at New York and bids him welcome in the name of the nation. Entertainments, to follow will perhaps be of the routine order, but to Admiral Togo throwing open the navy yards for his inspection will unquestionably seem the most distinguished honor that could be paid him. A few months ago an order of Secretary Meyer prohibited the inspection of any American navy yard by foreigners bent upon such a mission. When the secretary of the navy was apprised of Admiral Togo's visit, he issued an order to make an exception in the case of this Japanese visitor.

Before leaving Liverpool Admiral Togo expressed himself emphatically in relation to the friendship existing between his government and the American government. His visit may very well indicate that not only is there a satisfactory understanding between Tokio and Washington, but that the people of the two nations desire nothing more than continued peace.

The Strong Arm Squad

The strong arm squad organized by Police Commissioner Waldo for the suppression of car and street rowdism continues to demonstrate its usefulness. It has been on duty for a month and has to its credit 346 arrests and 308 convictions of rowdies with aggregate sentences of 2745 days in the workhouse and 525 fines. The seven youths who were fined $10 each in the Night Court Monday for creating disturbances owed their arrest and conviction to its activity. The strong arm squad is composed of fifteen members and the number is increased to seventy five on Sundays and holidays. Its name has a significance which is not likely to be lost on those who are the object of its vigilance, and the more its fame grows the better the prospect will be for the suppression of rowdism.—New York World.

HAS ENGAGED COUNSEL

The public service commission, in preparation for the railroad rate investigation ordered by the last legislature, has recently held conferences with the legislative rate committee and with the counsel and experts of that committee.

The work of gathering information to enable the commission to formulate a plan for the investigation will be begun at once. Robert Rantoul of Boston, who was the active expert in the investigation before the legislature last winter, has been engaged by the commission and will immediately enter upon the necessary preliminary work. His services in the legislative investigation were highly satisfactory to the rate committee, who unanimously recommended his retention upon the investigation.

first, and Kirvan drew a pass. O'Brien drove down a grounder that Rossman could not handle and Reidon and Kirvan scored. Heffernan struck out and Males was out on a pop fly to Cragen.

Score Elks 2, K. C. 2.

The Elks added two more runs in the second. Rossman got a three-base hit and Philbrick struck out. Leary was struck and walked. Pray's grounder was lost by McWilliams and Rossman scored. Hanson went to first on an infield error and Leary romped home. Bunker was out on a drive to Mates and Cragen was hit, filling the bases, but Pray was thrown out at first for the final out. The Knights were unable to score. Driscoll was out on an infield grounder; McWilliams was hit and thrown out trying to steal second, and Dendero was thrown out at first.

Score Elks 4, K. C. 2.

The Elks did not score again until the last inning when Bunker singled and Cragen went to first on an error and Paul followed with a single, and Bunker scored. Cragen, who had moved up to second, attempted to go home on the same play, but he was thrown out at the home plate by Mates.

The Knights looked good for a score in the fourth. O'Brien got a single and moved to third on Rossman's error of Heffernan's grounder. Heffernan took a long lead off first and Leary threw to Bunker and he was chased between the bases and O'Brien started for third and leaving Heffernan a throw was made to third but O'Brien was safe. Heffernan tried the same stunt at second and O'Brien was almost forced out, and he was caught by Leary between third and home. Leary left his box and the Knights claimed that in doing so he made a balk, but it was not allowed. In the fifth there was another kick over Dendero's decision—Panagan out at second.

The game this evening will be Morley Bullon vs Y. M. C. A.

Because of the utter lack of foundation for the story the league refused to officially take action on the story.

OFFICIAL EXPLAINS

Trouble With North Dakota Described at Fore River

In connection with repairs that are being made at the New York yard upon the battleship North Dakota, an official of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, constructors of the fighting ship, said yesterday: "Unfriendly stories are being published by many newspapers regarding the work on the North Dakota. It has been stated that one of her big turbines is so tightly stuck to its casing that workmen have been weeks in prying it off, that the engines have been acting badly, and that no one can tell when the ship will be ready for service again.

Now, the facts in the case are that in accordance with the usual practice of raising turbine casings at stated intervals for examination of the interior, difficulty in taking off the casing of one of the turbine tops on the North Dakota was experienced. The cause was found to be a rusting of the diaphragms rims into the upper and lower halves of the casing.

"The North Dakota is scheduled to leave Aug. 20, and she will sail at that time. Her turbines have never been acting badly.

broken up by tillage so that the root characteristics have diminished and so have the floods. While opportunity has not been given for a close study of the question in this New Hampshire area and figures are not available, one must believe from casual observation that the water storage in the area can be largely increased by forestry and conservation methods. We want to hold back the waters that go over the dams in February and March, and let that water go down in July and August when it is needed to turn the wheels.

Considering the general prosperity of the conserved forest region as compared to a neglected hill country, we may refer to the recent report of the Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society on the afforestation of Scotland, designed to enable the land to support a larger population. The commission speaks of certain valleys containing 60,000 acres of plateable ground containing only 900 acres now tilled. The Scotch estimate is ten acres to a family so that there are now but 90 families supported on the land but with afforestation over the area in twenty years the commission estimates 200 families would find support and after forty years six hundred families. The scheme devises the creation of a resident population whose interest will be connected with forestry. Herein may we not find a suggestion as to what applied forestry would do for this sparsely settled area in New Hampshire.

Again as indicated what scientific methods may do to accelerate forestation on lands which are seeding themselves, we may refer to the article on Abandoned pastures in the Forestry Quarterly for June. Vermont has two state forests of small acreage which were gifts—the Dower forest of 310 acres and the Jones forest of 500 acres but the scope and object of a New Hampshire forest as herein suggested is far greater because not only would the state have a self supporting state forest in time, which would be a tremendous asset but economic power of the state would be increased and conserved by water storage and conservation.

This idea is but a personal suggestion. Purposely has the writer refrained from conferring with his associate commissioners that a state commission should in no way be bound or compromised. Before closing, a word may be said about the financial side and the idea must rest on its merits. We know that white pine will pay at least 4 per cent compound interest to plant. We know that in the area there is much marketable hard wood, under favorable transportation conditions. Suppose the state authorized the issue of 500,000 fifty year bonds at the rate of $50,000 a year. In this way some ten thousand acres a year could be acquired and put forestry methods. The total acquisition would approximate fifty thousand acres in a district embracing two hundred thousand less the water acreage. What this is, it is difficult to state but it is a good deal. Private owners could be relied upon to take care of another fifty thousand acres. Unless the forestry calculations are wrong, the state forest should take care of itself and the interest in twenty years and be able to pay off something on the principal in the later years if need be.

New Hampshire has been called the Switzerland of America for the last 200 years, because of the topography of the state, and when it became the playground of the nation it added force to the comparison, but that comparison will not be complete until she becomes like her namesake a winter as well as summer playground; then she will receive $25,000,000 from her tourist business every year.

Canada has established a little Switzerland in the Rocky Mountains and has advertised it as the playground of America. We must watch out or we will be robbed of our heritage.

New Hampshire offers a cheery welcome to all and invites them to come here and enjoy our blessings. She has them not for the few, any more than she has education and freedom for the few, for she has bought the Crawford Notch which will lead to the reserving forever of the White Mountains, as one grand natural sanatorium. We have been 400 years looking for a Moses to lead us to the promised land, and now a Moses has found us and will make our own land the promised land.

It is not enough for us to appreciate our splendid natural resources; we must tell them to others that they may appreciate them also.

Advertisements is one of the things that can not be dispensed with by the state, town, railway or other great business organizations. All must advertise unless they are willing to retrograde. Deterioration might be written with safety upon any enterprise that disregards the value of advertising. Advertising is the strongest power in business and state building. The era of state and civic advertising is just dawning. But state and civic advertising is based upon solid commercial experience. This is the age of combination. Men acting together can achieve a common good more quickly and more easily than they can acting singly. This was demonstrated several thousand years ago when men first met on the field of battle. It is an axiom that applies as effectively and directly to industry as to war.

Some one has said a community is judged by its citizens, but the citizens are judged by the community. An aggressive, progressive state or town that seeks opportunities, rather than waits for them sets the pace for all its citizens.

A state can not advertise itself by making known to itself its own advantages. It must make them known to other quarters. We can not put our candle under a bushel and expect wayfarers to see our light. We must mark out a path leading to New Hampshire and this brightly light our candles that those from far away may be attracted. The world must be constantly reminded of our splendid natural resources. The inspiring example of the railroads of the West which have populated a desert by their publicity work, and the Pacific coast in making that section of the country known, should teach us the value of the broadest kind of advertising to reach the whole country. The creation of a public sentiment of widespread knowledge about a state, is an asset often more valuable than the natural resources of a state or the immediate results that follow a broad advertising campaign.

Sydney Smith tells us, "Reputation is one of the prizes men contend for." It is as Mr. Burke calls it, "cheap defense and the ornament of nations, and the nurse of many exertions." It produces more labor and more talent than twice the wealth of the country could rear up. It is the coin of genius.

Switzerland leads the world in advertising her natural resources. And several business associations cooperate with her. They have made the Swiss people rich by making a four-season resort of that country. The great success of the tourist business of Switzerland is due to judicious advertising. The people of Europe laughed at the idea of making ice and snow compete with milder resorts, but her publicity bureau not only made Switzerland a winter resort but made it the busy season. New Hampshire should follow the example of her namesake, she should advertise all her splendid natural resources and business associations should be found to cooperate with her.

As a man thinketh, so is he. Each of us is simply and solely by reason of what we have thought. Our today's are but materialized thoughts of yesterday and our tomorrow will be but the finished material created from the warp and woof of our mental activities of today.

Let our mental activities of today be such that we will help to make what nature designed our beautiful and resourceful state to be—the Switzerland and the Belgium of America.

BY ORDER OF MAJORITY OF COUNCIL.

City Solicitor Emery Files a Bill in Equity Against New Hampshire National Bank.

Acting on a signed order of five members of the City Council, a majority, City Solicitor Samuel W. Emery on Wednesday filed a bill in equity against the New Hampshire National Bank. The bill cites the agreement entered into by the bank and the city, when the bank purchased the old city hall, to the effect that the bank agreed to keep open the approaches and driveways about the old city building, and it maintains that it is not doing so, but obstructing the same, and the bill asks the court to order such obstruction removed. It is returnable at the October term of court.

A PARISIAN CREATION.

One of the Latest Models
Turned Out by Doucet.

WARNING: PROOF OF BLACK AND WHITE.

Paris has gone mad this season over black and white effects, and the all white costume—shoes, hat, parasol and gown—is the last cry at the French races, where Dame Fashion is seen at her best and smartest.

The costume pictured has an over drapery and bodice trimming of black and white striped ribbon edged with bull adorned Cluny lace, which dentelle also forms the kimono waist. The underskirt of white chiffon is made fluffy about the bottom with three princess lace flounces. The grille and bow are of black velvet.

Queen Mary's Earrings. It is because Queen Mary is never seen without earrings that so many smart women of today are wearing them. Her majesty has a really fine collection of these ornaments, some of which are of great historic interest. Many fine pairs were bequeathed to the queen by her late mother, Mary, duchess of Teck, who also had a great penchant for earrings. For day wear the queen usually favors short earrings, generally of single stones, which rest on the ear, but in the evening she adopts the picturesque long shape. Her ears are pierced in old fashioned style, and she will have nothing to do with the screw fastenings which are almost universally used today.

Little Girl's Frock. Very stylish is this little dress when carried out in white linen or one of the dainty shades of chambray. Pink is an especially youthful color, and the wall of Troy trimming may be bought by the yard, which simplifies the making of this one piece model.

Good and Bad Corsets. The good corset is laced about the hips and holds its place independent of garters or straps. It has a straight front. It is only form fitting or loose about the waist and bust. It does not diminish the waist measure. It laces from below upward by means of two or more lace strings. A bad corset exercises its greatest compression about the waist and diminishes its measure from two to four inches. It is loose about the hips and held down by garters or by the tight lacing above.

NORTH DAKOTA DISABLED

BIG WARSHIP OUT OF COMMISSION OWING TO CARELESSNESS OF WORKMEN.

The battleship North Dakota, now tied up at the Brooklyn navy yard, is disabled, according to authoritative statements at the navy department. The great ship, however, is not out of commission because of an unsatisfactory type of engine, as some recent newspaper statements have indicated, but to a peculiar mishap. Admiral Cope, chief of the bureau of steam engineering in the navy department, said recently it was a mishap that would hardly occur a second time.

A workman, probably through carelessness, used a preparation called manganite, where he should have used graphite or some kind of grease. The result is that a large piece of steel over one of the turbine engines has rusted to the block to which it was bolted, and thus far has resisted all efforts to separate it. The battleship cannot go into commission again until these parts are separated.

Admiral Cope says this in no way justifies criticism of the turbine engines with which the North Dakota, built at the Fire River Shipbuilding Company, is equipped.

Officials in the navy department, and also in the state department, have information that matters, such as that just described, are being utilized in a campaign of detraction. One object seems to be to dissuade the Chilean government from awarding to American builders contracts for constructing the new dreadnoughts, bids for which were invited some months ago. The United States navy is no longer using turbine engines in its dreadnoughts, almost solely for the reason that, while higher speed can be attained, the consumption of fuel is comparatively greater than with reciprocating engines. Our warships are built with a view to crossing the Atlantic, if necessary, fighting a naval battle and getting back without refueling. European warships are built with turbine engines, because in time of war they need not have such large steaming radius. For its fast ships, like the scouts, the navy is still using the turbine engine.

It looks to Washington officials as though these facts were being made the most of though misstatements to discourage awards to United States yards for building the Chilean dreadnoughts.

Since Admiral Bowles surprised the shipbuilders of two continents by obtaining the contract for dreadnoughts for Argentina in competition with European yards, there has been resort to desperate tactics to prevent a repetition of this American triumph. The story was even circulated widely some weeks ago that the Fire River Company would default on its contract with Argentina.

Gas Economy

First—Figure how many days your bill covers. The dates of reading are on it. Then figure what your gas costs you per day. If you cook and light with gas you will be surprised how much enjoyment you get from our service for so little money per day. Cookery Points

Frozen Ginger Pudding.

A pudding served in the German household is a frozen ginger pudding. This is made by making a custard of one quart of milk and three well beaten eggs and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. This is put into the refrigerator until thoroughly cooled and then one quart of whipped cream flavored with a few drops of vanilla is added, together with one-half pint of preserved ginger and one-half pint of the syrup in which it is preserved. The ginger should be sliced very thin or chopped fine. Pour the whole into a freezer and when about half frozen add three-eighths of a pound of almond macaroons which have been rolled fine and a little candied orange peel. Freeze this until it is firm and creamy. This is very delicious, and some people add a cupful of orange pulp cut into small pieces.

Preparing Grapefruit.

Take special pains in preparing grape fruit for the breakfast table at this time of the year. To begin with, take care in selecting the fruit, which, to be good, should be heavy, firm and thin skinned. Dark spots on the surface are said to denote a superior fruit. To make it especially tempting serve with clean, finely chopped ice. Partly fill with the ice one of the long stemmed grape fruit glasses, or, if you do not possess these glasses, any dainty glass bowl will do. Then place on this bed of ice a glass cup filled with grape fruit pulp. If you choose to serve the grape fruit sweetened, prepare it several hours before serving to give the sugar and fruit time to assimilate.

Current Macaroons.

Half a pound of almonds, one and a half ounces of bitter almonds, one pound of sugar, three whites of eggs, two ounces of currants. Blanch the almonds and cut them into small dice. After cutting the bitter almonds sprinkle them with sugar and brown them slightly in the oven. Mix sweet and bitter almonds and sugar together, add the currants and the whites of eggs gradually until the whole is sufficiently moistened to drop from the spoon to a baking tin, which must be covered with water or white paper (not buttered), touch the surface of each one lightly with a brush previously dipped in cold water and bake in a slow oven until crisp.

Fried Chicken a la Maryland.

Joint a tender chicken as for fricassee. Wash and wipe perfectly dry. Dip each piece in beaten egg, then roll in salted and peppered cracker dust until it is thoroughly coated. Set upon ice for an hour. Have plenty of clean dripping or other fat in a deep frying pan and bring slowly to the bubbling point. Lay in the chicken carefully and fry on both sides to a fine brown. Do not put too many pieces in at a time, or all sides of each will not be done evenly. Fry long enough to make sure the thickest pieces are done all through.

Potatoes a la Princess.

Take one pound of plainly boiled potatoes and rub them through a fine sieve; mix well into this puree one and a half tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of grated cheese, two raw yolks of eggs, a pinch of salt and pepper, and make into little rolls about two and a half inches long and three-quarters of an inch in diameter, using a little flour as for rolling pastries; put these on a well buttered baking tin and brush over with beaten egg, mark with a knife and bake a nice brown color in the oven.

Coffee Custard Frappe.

Two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of flour, four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Beat well together. Put a cupful of coffee and the same of milk into a double boiler. When it nears the boiling point pour it over the beaten eggs, flour, etc., and mix well. Return to the boiler and cook until it is like thick cream. Pour into small cups or glasses to cool. Serve ice cold with whipped cream. Should the coffee flavor not be pleasing, substitute a second cup of milk for it. Flavor with any extract you like.

Had Enough Chin.

Harber—Shall I go over the chin again, sir? Victim—No. You didn't say anything very interesting.—Life.

Woman's World

Miss Florence Sutton a Coming Woman Among Tennis Players.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

MISS FLORENCE SUTTON, a sister of May Sutton, who won the tennis championship in 1909, is looked upon in the sporting world as a coming woman among tennis players. The younger Miss Sutton has been doing splendid work with the racket since she came from home in California early in the season, and she bids fair to uphold the family reputation for expert tennis play.

Tennis is being taken up by girls more strenuously than ever this summer, and it's a fine game for women, but it takes incessant practice and superb health to make a strong player, and a sure eye, a quick and decisive brain and unerring judgment to make a clever one. Some of the attributes may be acquired by training, but not all of them; still, any girl, blessed with normal health and strength may become, with little effort, a better than the average tennis player and derive some of the real benefits of the game.

SUFFRAGETTES WILL FAST.

Arrange For Week of Self Denial to Swell Exchequer.

Six perspiring suffragettes lined up recently at a soda water counter not far from the Metropolitan life building, in the tower of which is the headquarters of the woman suffrage party of New York city.

"Shall we have lemonade?" one of them asked the others tentatively. "Lemonade at 5 cents? It isn't Aug. 15 yet. We'll have chocolate nut sundae, the best," said a large suffragette in a sailor hat. "Ah," she sighed when the sundae had come, each with a cherry on top, "make the most of your chances now, for the week of self denial comes soon."

Yes, the suffragettes are planning a whole week of self denial, beginning Aug. 15. Fired by accounts of how Englishwomen raise big sums of money in no time at all for the cause, the members of the woman suffrage party have resolved to see if they can't do the same by giving up things they are fond of for seven days. Half of the wealth which it is expected will pour in during this week for women fast will go to the party coffers and half will be sent to California to aid the suffrage campaign there.

All varieties of self denial are planned by the eager suffragettes. One is going to do without butter. "Butter is expensive," she explained. "and I am getting too fat anyhow." All will eschew ice cream soda; neither will any go shopping during the week of self denial.

Agitated women wearing yellow buttons are observed in the shops during the next five weeks laying in fingerie blouses and jabots, put it down to the necessity of preparing for the nonspending week that's to come.

Egyptian Women Run Newspaper. Egyptian women have a weekly newspaper, owned and edited by women. The appearance of the newspaper is regarded as a favorable sign of the development of the women of that country and as a promise of the regeneration of Egypt. The purpose of the paper is to improve the condition of the Moslem women, to educate them and to fit them to earn their own livelihood. It is expected to develop their standard of thought and intelligence and to train them to think and act for themselves. Egyptian women are employed as writers and the weekly paper relates the society affairs of Cairo, tells of fashion and prints fiction.

RYE BEACH ADDS ANOTHER WIN

Defeat U.S.S. Wheeling 15 To 5

The collegians who are representing Rye Beach this season on the diamond added another victory to its already long list on Wednesday afternoon by defeating the nine from the U. S. S. Wheeling by a score of 15 to 5 in a one sided and uninteresting game. The game was played on the Farmgut House grounds before a good size crowd.

Clem Gile the Yale freshman, pitched for the winners and allowed only six hits. He fanned 12 and issued only one pass. He was well supported by Leeds Barroll of the University of Pennsylvania catcher. Parker of Yale also starred for the winners.

Goldsmith, who did the twirling

As It Looked to Shortstop Hodgkins of the Wheelings for the sailors pitched well until the sixth inning. He struck out ten batters but was as wild as a hawk passing ten men, besides making two wild pitches. Stauffer, Owens and Garza excelled for the bluejackets.

Emerson Piano Quality.

Quality in a Piano is absolutely essential, for a poor quality Piano is not a Piano at all. It may be a "furniture piano" if you will, but it is not a musical one—and what is the good of a Piano if it is no musical? The Emerson Piano seems to grow better every day. The makers of this instrument have lately surpassed themselves. The Pianos that are now coming to us are simply magnificent. The touch, the tone, and the finish are better than ever before. The more difficult you are to please, the better we shall like it, for you cannot but be pleased with these instruments, yet with all their goodness they are sold for a fair price on easy terms.
